

1. The Courtier, p 19
2. Chesterfield's Letters to His Son —
3. The Courtier, p 20.

Then, sometimes. I will have the title written out on my copy and you will not need to write the title because the title has already been used for a preceding footnote. In that case, of course you use "op. cit." in place of the title. This work needs to be done exactly right as a gross error could be made, you see, by the wrong reference being given.

I am returning pp 19 and 20 for revision.

On p 19, the footnotes should be:

1. Lord Chesterfield's Letters to His Son, Letter CXXXIV, p 136
2. op. cit., Letter CXI, p 105
